

Starting this Monday, for three days (March 29-31), the United States is engaging, and partnering with international communities through Global Pulse 2010, an online collaboration event, to help facilitate what could be one of the largest worldwide dialogues on development ever created. This conversation is key to President Obama's Global Engagement Agenda and USAID is proudly leading this initiative.

Global Pulse 2010 is already providing an opportunity for many around the world to voice opinions, share ideas, and create innovative solutions to social issues facing the global community.
